Course Introduction

Forced displacement in Sub-Saharan Africa has become one of the most pressing humanitarian challenges of the 21st century. Driven by conflicts, climate change, and socio-political instability, millions of individuals and families are forced to leave their homes, disrupting communities and regional development. Understanding the root causes, dynamics, and responses to displacement is critical for humanitarian practitioners, policymakers, and organizations seeking effective interventions. Forced Displacement in Sub-Saharan Africa Training Course provides a comprehensive overview of the factors influencing forced displacement, practical strategies for intervention, and innovative solutions for sustainable support to affected populations.

This course equips participants with critical knowledge and practical skills to address the complex nature of forced displacement. Emphasizing evidence-based approaches, regional case studies, and policy frameworks, learners will gain insights into humanitarian coordination, protection mechanisms, and resilience-building strategies. Through interactive modules, participants will develop actionable strategies to mitigate the impact of displacement and enhance community recovery. The training also integrates key trends, digital tools, and emerging research to ensure that participants are at the forefront of effective forced displacement management.
