Gender and Migration Training Course

Introduction

Gender and Migration Training Course provides an in-depth exploration of the intricate connections between gender and migration, offering critical insights into the diverse experiences of migrant women, men, and gender non-conforming individuals. As global migration patterns continue to evolve, understanding the gendered dimensions of displacement, labor mobility, remittances, and integration is paramount for developing effective, equitable, and human rights-based policies and programs. Participants will gain practical tools and analytical frameworks to address gender-based violence, promote economic empowerment, and ensure the protection and well-being of all migrants, fostering more inclusive and resilient societies.

Delivered through an interactive and participatory methodology, this course emphasizes current research, best practices, and real-world case studies to equip professionals with the knowledge and skills necessary to mainstream gender perspectives into migration governance and humanitarian action. We will delve into topics such as gender-responsive data collection, intersectionality in migration, climate-induced migration with a gender lens, and the role of technology in facilitating safe migration pathways for all genders. By fostering a deeper understanding of these complex dynamics, this program aims to empower individuals and organizations to champion gender equality and social justice within the ever-changing landscape of human mobility.

Course Duration
