Category	Migration and Refugee	Duration	5 Days
Base Fee	$1,500 USD	Delivery Mode	Online / On-site Hybrid

Course Introduction

Cities play a pivotal role in shaping inclusive societies, especially in the context of migration and integration. With the rapid rise of urbanization and diverse migration flows, cities have become the primary destination for migrants seeking better economic opportunities, safety, and social mobility. The effectiveness of cities in integrating migrants determines not only the success of newcomers but also the sustainable growth of urban communities. The Role of Cities in Migrant Integration Training Course provides deep insights into urban policies, governance structures, and community-driven initiatives that make cities strong actors in promoting diversity, social cohesion, and resilience.

This program equips participants with practical tools and case studies on how cities can address integration challenges, from housing and employment to healthcare and education access. It emphasizes innovative, sustainable, and people-centered approaches to city planning and migrant support. By combining academic knowledge with real-life examples, participants will learn how local authorities, non-governmental organizations, and communities can collaborate to foster inclusive cities that embrace diversity and drive economic and cultural innovation.
